Congratulations!

Let me take this time to wish you both a happy and healthy life together.

Planning for a wedding takes endless hours planning to make your special day a life long memory that will be cherished forever. There is one important factor that as a professional I would feel privileged to share with you both—your insurance needs.

Now that you have been joined in marriage, you must carefully review your insurance needs as a couple to save money in insurance premiums. Both of your auto policies need some attention in order to insure you correctly. Who are the vehicles titled to currently? Are you thinking of titling the vehicles to both of your names? With the endless list of changes ranging from your address to your driver's license, insurance should also be an important change that must not be overlooked.

It is my hope this important subject has come up between conversations. Just a few simple questions to create a conversation: After the honeymoon has come to an end, are you going to buy a house or rent? Renters insurance is an inexpensive way to protect your personal property. Another important question is your auto insurance. In either case, being added to your spouse's or keeping your own, a full review should be done. Do you have life insurance in place somewhere? If not, there are many options. Health insurance is another big issue in today's society. If your employer does offer a health plan, take full advantage of the plan. If not, seek out a well-rounded health plan that would be beneficial to both of you and perhaps down the road, your children. These are just some points to ponder about as life begins as one.

The last point I want to make to both of you, please don't wait. Insurance is a necessity that is designed to protect you from sudden accidents. Last thing either of you should go through is to plan the future without each other. Please contact me regarding the needs and concerns you may have. It would be my pleasure to help you secure the bright future ahead.

Best Wishes,
